Western Star. When Stephen Vincent Benet died at the age of 44 on March 13, 1943, the very date of the edition of the Saturday Evening Post that contained his essay on Freedom from Fear, he was in the beginning stages of his work titled Western Star, which was an epic narrative poem (several books) on the settling of America. In 1944, he was awarded a posthumous Pulitzer Prize for Western Star.

Stephen Vincent Benet

Benet only lived long enough for Western Star to encompass his story of the settlement of Jamestown and Plymouth. Benet’s next book in the Western Star sequence was to have begun:

*Now for my country that it still may live,
All that I have, all that I am I’ll give.
It is not much besides the gift of the brave
And yet accept it, since ‘tis all I have.*

Key Understanding: Western Star and Epiphany, January 6, 1941. Western Star is obviously referring to the rise of America – like a rising sun, or rising star. The United States of America was/is the Western Star. Moreover, because Western Star was written by Stephen Vincent Benet, who died on the date of the Saturday Evening Post edition that contained his essay on the final of the Four Freedoms, Western Star* is attached to the Four Freedoms of Epiphany, January 6, 1941. This makes total sense for the rise of America as the Western Star is as such because it is the world’s Shrine of Democracy, epitomized by the Four Freedoms.

Matthew 2:1-2 (KJV) Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men

[Magi] from the east to Jerusalem,
2 Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? For we have seen his STAR IN THE EAST, and are come to worship him.
