1929 and Anne Frank in Old Amsterdam

In 1933, in response to Hitler's anti-Jewish decrees, Otto Frank opened a branch of his company, Opteka, in Amsterdam and began planning to bring his family there. The Frank family finally moved into a house on Medwedplein in southern Amsterdam in 1933 and Anne began to attend the nearby Montessori school, where she excelled. Anne made many friends and was an exceptional student.

The story of Anne Frank and The Hiding Place unfolded in Old Amsterdam.

1929 and Wall Street in New Amsterdam

New York City was originally founded by the Dutch and named New Amsterdam. The Wall Street nickname for the New York Stock Exchange originates from the street – Wall Street – that ran alongside a wall built by the Dutch for the protection of the north side of the town.

The 1929 Wall Street Crash unfolded in what was formerly New Amsterdam.
